Section 2: The Harding Presidency (pages 419–421)

1. The tariff made it impossible to sell their goods in the U.S. to raise money to repay their war debts. So Britain and France put pressure on Germany. The U.S. then needed to loan money to Germany so Britain and France could repay their war debts.
2. He exercised poor judgment in the appointment of some of his cabinet members.
3. The Teapot Dome scandal shows that Harding's administration included corrupt men.
